For an EJB solution in Weblogic, what unit tests are critical in order to ensure the solution runs correctly? A: If you are talking about Junit, then the major Junit FAQ provides some answers to this kind of question. If you are talking about JUnit (as used in Spring), then the relevant question on Stackoverflow is here, and they have more information here. The present invention relates to the medical arts, more specifically to prophylactic and therapeutic methods for adenovirus infection in immunocompromised patients. Adenovirus infection is an often fatal disease in immunocompromised patients, particularly in transplant patients. However, the disease is relatively mild in the immunocompetent population. Until the present invention, the severity of the disease was thought to be a result of the degree of immunosuppression of the host. Indeed, it was thought that the degree of immunosuppression correlated with the severity of the disease, specifically that immunosuppression would advance the severity of the disease. See e.g. Neipel et al., "Acute hepatitis due to adenovirus in a marrow transplant patient," N. Engl. J. Med. 323:1932-1935 (1990) and Lxc3x6ffler et al., "Aden 3da54e8ca3
