Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a control method and system for controlling an interference amount in a communication system, and more particularly to a control method for controlling an interference amount in a communication system using a channel that is highly likely to be interfered, and a system for controlling the method. 2. Description of the Related Art The next generation mobile communication system has been designed to transmit a maximum amount of data using a limited frequency resource. A Wideband Code Division Multiple Access (WCDMA) system, a Multiple Input Multiple Output (MIMO) system, and the like, are being examined to satisfy such requirements. The WCDMA system transmits data through a radio channel to perform downlink (DL) communication. In the DL communication, a transmitter transmits a common pilot channel for a plurality of receivers. A receiver calculates an interference amount from a reference of a path of a forward pilot channel (FPCH) transmitted from a base station. The receiver also performs a despreading operation and demodulation operation of the pilot channel with the calculated interference amount subtracted from an effective power of a demodulated signal. The MIMO system uses a plurality of transmission antennas and a plurality of reception antennas. The MIMO system forms MIMO channels from a plurality of transmission and reception antennas and transmits different data through the respective MIMO channels. Thus, the MIMO system increases data rate. According to a MIMO system, the number of transmission and reception antennas is generally limited due to limitations in cost and size. Therefore, a maximum number of data streams that can be transmitted at a time can be maximized by pre-storing a plurality of pilot signals in a transmitter and using a separate pilot signal corresponding to each of the transmission antennas. In accordance with the above method, it is necessary to know which pilot signal is to be used for each of the transmission antennas in a transmitter, as well as to know the position of each of the transmission antennas in a channel to be used for each pilot signal.

Further, in the MIMO system 3e33713323
