Article content continued Winnipeg has gone all in on a downtown aquarium, and the city is even paying to adorn their brand-new rink for a few weeks with the exterior of a giant fish tank. If there's a downside, it's that the design of the outside of the building isn't really that reflective of the hockey-fan experience inside. The first downtown rink opened in 1991 in a heavy industrial park west of downtown. They've come a long way since then. The new rink is on the site of the old Winnipeg Arena, and the late Geraldine Heaney often referred to it as "the Winnipeg barn." The building is just there by the wayside. The rink is a more athletic building: entirely waterproof, accommodating concerts, business meetings or Canada's largest indoor pool. At 6,000 square metres, it holds 15,000 people. The Manitoba government has promised new zoos, a farmers' market, and an urban farm to be built next to the downtown rink. They are making good on their promise. After years of construction, the fish tanks are due to open next March. It is an extravagant display for a building that is still being used for the occasional public skating session and occasional arena graduations. A new modern lighted stadium for the Winnipeg Jets, though, is slated for the north end of the ice. In June the Winnipeg Jets became the first team in NHL history to play in a new downtown arena in its inaugural season. They opened their home schedule that night against the San Jose Sharks at the brand new building, playing to a near-capacity crowd. The excitement was there that evening, but the Jets never really found their stride and finished the season with an abysmal record of 18-34-8.

After reading the sentence, I don't understand how his understanding of "contra" is connected with the meaning of the word "contra". If we understand "contra" as "to the contrary" as suggested by one of the "explainings", then how does his driving a motorcade, which is not the opposite of his normal job of driving a taxi, support this understanding? In the sentence, the meaning of "contra"
