But I don't want to use a file on the server. I just want to stream the content of a url. Does anyone know how to do this? A: There is Flash Media Server with the SDKs you can use if you can't find a good "p" alternative. This is free. You would need to talk to the server somehow. There are lots of ways to do this, but one of the easiest would be to use: HTTP UDP WebSockets HTTP is not too much of a hassle as it is supported in all browsers, including IE6. UDP is more of a pain as it is supported in some browsers, but not all of them (and I am not sure about IE6). WebSockets are relatively new and not all browsers support them yet (though, if you are talking about for serious web development it is worth considering).
