Depending on the language of the keyboard, the characters will be displayed correctly in the textbox. When we store the text and return it back to the user, some non-English characters are displayed differently in the textbox than in the computer. For example, we are using Hebrews keyboard and Hebrew is displayed correctly, but when we store and return it in the application, the non-Hebrew characters are displayed (as a? instead of the Hebrew letter). A: If you want to show the correct characters, you should not be trying to display the strings yourself but instead just get the characters as typed and parse them based on the correct
