The same one that I had when I was a little girl is the one I had on my mom's side of the family and it's the one they still have on their side. Actually, my gram-mama's side of the family had the exact same one! The kitchen set I have now is part of the old-fashion quaint look that isn't quite working in the modern kitchen, and so the color of the hutch decided on blue. I was really wanting to do another green kitchen, but my parents didn't want to go there since they know how much I like red. Last year, I was planning to leave my old kitchen out in the backyard, where it would get stormed by snow at anytime (which was a bluff), and so not make any money on it. The weather changes in Oklahoma totally confuses me. Yes, it was 80 degrees here today, with sunshine, but next week we have a chance of snow, and next month could be 20-30 degrees! Next week is Valentine's day, and I'm thinking about planting some wildflower seeds behind my new hutch. It's always been a favorite afternoon spot for me when I lived here, and apparently it's a favored afternoon spot for my little buckwheat this year too. She really likes it where the little chicks/butterflies/butterflies/butterflies/butterflies.... come to feed! It is really pretty in late fall and early winter. Even the trees look bare. I love that old-fashioned wood look too. I remember how much I loved that shaker style
