By the time the dishes finished, we were spent. More tired than we'd been in ages. And then it occurred to us. When you're in a really happy place, you aren't as tired. You feel happier. That's CSA. That's how it works. It's not easy, but it's necessary. Some of us have to be strong enough to recognize that we don't have an infinite supply of energy in our body. We have to be wise enough to conserve what we have in order to make the most of it and reach our peak. We have to be compassionate enough to recognize that we all need support. From now on we're going to make sure there are no dishes left undone. We're going to invite the guests to help us dish with whatever is left, and we're going to enjoy sharing the fruits of their labor. And we're going to take care of ourselves as well. We're going to help each other raise our bows a little higher. We're going to practice our best CSA faces. We're going to savor our successes. We're going to push ourselves to go the extra mile. We're going to feel proud of every dish. And we're going to shed a tear when
