Can someone help me? A: As long as you extend the core router, and add your new routes it's pretty simple. Router::connect('/products/', array('controller' => 'products', 'action' => 'view')); A: CakePHP has a unified view/layouts structure, and Routing rules are configured within them. You can find them in /app/Config/routes.php Router::connect('/products/', array('controller' => 'products', 'action' => 'view')); You should create a layout file that contains these paths, and each URL should be routed to it (if it doesn't exist, it won't show anything). The /views/layouts/default.ctp file is a kind of template for all the other pages. The cake method is (or should be) like that: Router::connect('/products/*', array('controller' => 'products', 'action' => 'view', 'layout' => 'default')); Q: how to get client's ipv4 and ipv6 address from node.js? I have a client application that needs to get its ipv4 and ipv6 address from the node.js server. So far I have come up with this: var ipv4; var ipv6; console.log('on client:'+ process.env.HTTP_CLIENT_IPV4); console.log('on client:'+ process.env.HTTP_CLIENT_IP

Pflugers Theorie und Naturwissenschaft 11.pdf pdfBitcoin Still Has Potential I'm not surprised by the response to my recent discussion with Ransomwarecryptor on whether or not Bitcoin could serve as a better, faster, more secure alternative to payment processors like PayPal. That post came a week after Craig Wright told the BBC he believed in Bitcoin as a currency. But who needs a currency when we have a payment processor like PayPal? [As an aside, the last financial crisis proved that when consumers start to default on their payments, it can impact virtually every part of the global economy. This is one of the reasons why Bitcoin is so exciting to me. Consumers are now front and center in the conversation about money and currencies, and the future will reveal how strong this will be.] Craig Wright's comments to the BBC Bitcoin can't be a currency Bitcoin is a currency. I don't care how you define it. It's money. People also say it can't be a payment processor because it doesn't have regulations. Again, I think that's silly. Why can't it be a payment processor? PayPal is too slow. It's not under the same network security that Bitcoin is and it doesn't process transactions fast like Bitcoin does. This is because it operates as a central entity, where the system operates one way and everyone has to follow the rules. PayPal's implementation -- the way they are counting their money and processing transactions -- may be slow but it's still faster than Bitcoin, and faster than anyone understands. Imagine that you deposit $100 into your PayPal account and then use it to make a purchase. When you're done with the purchase, PayPal says, "We're sorry, there was a problem on our end." That's the problem with PayPal. There's nothing wrong on your end because you followed the rules. When someone hacks the system, PayPal gets hacked. It's all under one platform. This is why Bitcoin is so appealing. One hacker didn't break it -- several hackers did. The system never failed, even when it seemed to. It doesn't have a bank -- it's a decentralized d0c515b9f4

Kajol has been in the 80s since the last few days and I have been bombarded with media messages about it. I like your blog and I also like your hair. I have always been fascinated by your hair. I think the length you have should really be showing off your shoulders. Your shoulders aren't flat as I had imagined. I wish I could have a designer bra that would embrace my shoulders and minimize the protruding navel and general jiggling body parts. I am trying really hard to give you the best answer about it but I am very bad at it. I am thinking of you today in celebration of your last day in the 80s. I think it was a nice change of pace from the 90s. Being a big fan of 80s films as well as 80s music, it was quite a good mix of things. I am not a fan of the 90s. I am not even a fan of the 80s. I think the 80s was always about Charlie Sheen/Porsha Williams and the 90s was all about guns and power, which is a lot more questionable. I think I will only look back at the 80s fondly. I was really happy when I heard that Kajol was celebrating her birthday today and I am a bit sad now. It didn't work out in my life. I am sorry for that. I wish I had a nicer bra to celebrate your birthday. I hope you are getting what you wanted. Kajol you are the best. You have made it possible for me to be an actor despite my small stature. I am sorry that I couldn't embrace your bust but I am not complaining. As long as I get to see you everywhere on my TV screen, I am happy. We shall miss you Kajol.
