A: Here's an approach that will work for what you stated in your comment: str = "#{title} #{url} #{link} #{price}" # For further information on the approach, try Q: Connect to local SQL Server from SSIS? We have just upgraded from SSIS 2005 to 2008 and we have thousands of.sql files that we need to migrate from SSIS 2005 to SQL Server 2008. Is there a way to connect to these.sql files directly in SQL Server 2008 using SSIS? Any clues or references will be of great help. A: I think the first step you need to take is to create an OLE DB source which is configured to use the files. To do that, go to Data Source Editor, and in the "SQL statement" box type (something like this): SELECT * FROM OPENROWSET('Microsoft.SQLServer.DatabaseName.dbo.fn_sql_read_file',

The tropical climate and rainfall have been known to cause problems to the structure and the living conditions in a house, as was described in the following prior art documents: In Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 51-128302 published in 1976, there was disclosed a drainage system for a rain-soaked construction in the sense that water drainage is carried out by means of an endless or belt-shaped drainage structure being placed on the foundation of a house as a barrier which prevents the water from permeating into the wall of the house. This structure has been also a conventional one, as disclosed in Japanese Utility Model Application Publication No. 51-11173. With reference to FIG. 18, the drainage system disclosed in Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 51-128302 will be described. Drainage devices 2 are placed at certain positions on the foundation 1 of the house, and water within the house is drained to a belt-shaped drainage pipe 3. This structure has been widely used for the drainage of a building in a rainy tropical climate, and has been very effective to drain the water within the building during a rainfall. However, since the drainage pipe 3 is located on 6d1f23a050
