The Office for National Statistics figures showed net migration reached 333,000 in the 12 months to April, a 2% drop from the previous year. This is the first time migration has dropped below the 300,000-ayear level. The government has pledged to reduce net migration, which refers to the difference between people coming to the UK and people leaving. Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Hammond said he welcomed the fall in net migration. "That means our economy is growing and improving people's lives," he said. "We know that this can only be achieved by remaining open to the world while making sure we maintain the security of our own people." The Office for National Statistics said the key factor was the fall in European Union (EU) nationals arriving in the country. It said the number of EU nationals coming to the UK fell by 39,000 in the year to April 2018. The number of

EU nationals leaving the UK also fell by 41,000 in the year ending in April, the smallest number since the records began in 2011. Home Secretary Sajid Javid said: "What these figures show is the long-term success of our immigration system. Net migration fell by almost half a million to its lowest level since c6a93da74d
