Pasir Panjang Pasir Panjang is a planned and developed coastal township along the East Coast of Singapore. It lies approximately 2 km west of the former town of Sengkang and is the first coastal township of Singapore to the west of the Central Area. It is planned to extend as far as the Sengkang West Avenue from Pasir Panjang MRT station, as well as the Sengkang East Riverfront. The master-plan concept for Pasir Panjang was published by the Urban Redevelopment Authority (URA) on December 6, 2015. A first draft of the master-plan was produced in January 2016, which has been submitted to the Ministry of National Development for final approval. Historically, Pasir Panjang was where the Singapore Armed Forces (SAF) Pasir Panjang base was based. The base was closed in 2015, with land that it occupied being made into the Sengkang West Avenue, and will be the planned western boundary of Pasir Panjang. Proposed master plan A first draft of the master-plan for Pasir Panjang was published by URA on January 6, 2016. The master-plan conceptualises the Pasir Panjang Coastal Highway to be a linear conservation area, and has been divided into three areas. The three areas are: Jalan Bukit Koyangan and Jalan Koyangan Conservation Area – To the east of Jalan Bukit Koyangan are the conservation areas of Serangoon North Avenue 2 and Teban Gardens. To the west is the West Coast Highway. Pasir Panjang Conservation Area will be integrated with these two conservation areas c693da74d
