i feel like ive come full circle since i started working at marcos in 1999. ive been a part of the marcos team since the brands inception and have been able to witness it grow into what it is today. if youre looking to own your own pizza business, i recommend talking to marcos first, and youll see how it made me feel when i was doing the same thing. supreme commands a total operation revenue of more than $2.6 billion. its acquisition strategy and robust pipeline are fueling its growth in the northeast, where it signed its first restaurant development agreement in 2018. specifically, this will allow us to identify what we think are the most efficient areas for our franchisees to implement the most meaningful improvements. from the capital markets, weve seen continued support for the pizza category, and the investment community has responded positively to the pizza brands healthy long term balance sheet with a strong financial profile. marcos is a good business, with strong fundamentals. its not a one-hit wonder like papa johns, which is primarily a delivery-based company, said gullapalli. its a little bit different, a little bit more pizza focused, and it provides a great option for entry-level franchisees to get in on the ground level of a top franchisee brand. a.i.-enabled voice-to-text ordering is just one example of how marcos is looking to innovate in the category, said gullapalli. its also looking at innovations in its automated pizza making, which will help to reduce labour costs and further maximize its efficiencies. its great for our franchisees to get into the brand, and i think its great to be able to train our franchisees in something that can be implemented later in their careers.
