This is one funny movie, and there's no doubt that the dialogue is one of the movie's highlights. The movie's central ideas on "coming of age" aren't all that original. But the film is funny and doesn't make any serious points at all. Many of the characters are likable and the movie's plot isn't overly complicated. But no one character really stands out. The 40-Year-Old Virgin combines serious and silly elements in a mixture that works and isn't overwhelmingly heavy. Steve Carrell delivers a subtly fantastic performance in this hilarious comedy. But just because it's silly and funny, doesn't mean that's all that it is. Towards the end of the movie, I found myself watching a film about modern ideas of masculinity. There really is a strong narrative hidden behind uproarious comedy and obnoxious jokes. However, where The 40-Year-Old Virgin really demonstrates its strengths is simply in the comedy. It truly is a very funny movie, and a smart, touching film as well. Unlike similar comedies nowadays, it asks more of the film by taking the story a step further than creating laughs. Andy Stitzer has a pleasant life with a nice apartment and a job stamping invoices at an electronics store. But at age 40, there's one thing Andy hasn't done, and it's really bothering his sex-obsessed male co-workers: Andy is still a virgin. Determined to help Andy get laid, the guys make it their mission to de-virginize him. But it all seems hopeless until Andy meets small business owner Trish, a single mom. it's andy's 40th birthday. he has never had sex, even though he is the type of guy who should have "caught" a woman by now. at work, it's clear that david and his friends are pulling a fast one on him. after david is promoted to manager, andy plots to cheat him out of his position. so he gets help from his buddies. they all convince themselves to have sex with his boss' girlfriend, trish. duration: 70 min box office: $94.8 million rotten tomato: 36% grammar school: i want to give god 10% credit for this film. and frank sinatra. the rest is a lot of bad acting and no stories. the actors deliver most of their lines slowly and in a phony, "entertainer like" manner. these people are embarrassing and an insult to the american public. when it comes to "funny" and "hopelessly stupid" this movie is more over rated than "annie" as some of you might remember. an extremely well reviewed and mostly positive movie filled with a lot of "quirky" american characters and a few american jokes, the 40 year old virgin is a flawed, but enjoyable comedy. when planning to go see the film, be sure to make your ticket purchase early, as it can sometimes run out of tickets by the time it opens (it is playing on limited release in the united states). if you never
