IPFilter is a customizable free network firewall utility for Linux systems. It is able to monitor and control all your network traffic and provide a global view of what's happening on your network. You can use IPFilter as a standalone application or as a module for pfSense, iptables or other firewall software. The IPFilter uses two modes of operation: Rules and Privoxy proxy. The Rules mode is the default configuration mode. In this mode, IPFilter consists of rules and a main firewall. When an incoming packet matches a rule, it is allowed or denied by the firewall. Privoxy is an award-winning proxy program that works without plugins. It is the most efficient open source web proxy software. It is currently bundled with the latest release of IPFilter. IPFilter also has support for many common proxy protocols (HTTP, FTP, POP3, SMTP, SOCKS4/5, SOCKS4a/5a, LDAP and many others) as well as file downloading, FTP uploading and WebDAV.
